Meeting called to order by Pres. Joyce Breland.

Introduction of guest speaker, Rhoda Green, native of Barbados. Topic: "Tapping Into Your Roots."

Rhoda Green was born in Barbados, she completed high school there. She later moved to New York with her parents and in 1978 with her husband moved to Charleston, SC. She trained as a court reporter and worked with the Master in Equity dealing with grants, chain of title, and land ownership.

Main theme of her talk was the Barbados American Connection. In 1625 the British arrived looking for land. In 1627 they planted a colony, bringing many indentured servants. Tobacco was their primary crop but later was supplanted by sugar cane, a much better crop for the hot, humid climate. In 1670 Carolina became a Barbados colony and became a culture hub for the Carolinas. Some of the Carolina settlers who were also Barbados planters are: Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper, Thomas and Ann Drayton, John Colleton, Colonel John Gibbs, John Ladson, Edward and Arthur Middleton, John Yeamans. John Colleton owned five plantations in Barbados. Barbados influenced local architecture, music, art, education, food, fashion, religion, government, economy, military and piracy.
